

Every day, school staff play a vital role in keeping children safe. Understanding allergies and knowing how to respond to anaphylaxis can make a critical difference in an emergency.

This essential e-learning training, developed in partnership with the Sadie Bristow Foundation, builds staff knowledge and confidence to recognise allergic reactions, understand their responsibilities and respond quickly and effectively when it matters most.

Available through ConnectED, the training gives school leaders a central register to view and manage staff completion, making it easy to monitor participation across your organisation.

Practical, school-focused training

From understanding allergies and anaphylaxis to responding in an emergency, the training gives staff the knowledge and confidence they need to help create a safer, more allergy-aware school environment.

What does the training cover?

The e-learning takes staff through:

- Why allergy awareness matters in schools
- Understanding allergies and anaphylaxis
- Preventing allergic reactions in school
- Responding to an allergic emergency
- Creating an allergy-aware school
- Final assessment to check understanding

How to Register Your Interest

Education providers wishing to access the training should register their interest by Friday 9 October 2026. Registrations received after this date cannot guarantee inclusion in the free training rollout.

REGISTER YOUR INTEREST HERE

Once you have registered, a member of the ConnectED team will be in touch to discuss the set-up and rollout of the training across your organisation.